ROOSEVELT WILL NOT STATE HIS POSITION

Colonel Holds Secret Political Conference in Seattle With Progressives

Seattle.—Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, ex-president of the United States, author, naturalist and explorer, arrived in Seattle with Mrs. Roosevelt and his secretary, John W. McGrath, and remained over night, when he left for San Francisco.

That the conditions in 1916 will guide Colonel Roosevelt's actions at the time, and that at the present he either has formed or will announce no program, was the statement he made shortly after his arrival.

"Tell me what the conditions will be in 1916 and I will tell you what I will do," he said. This was the only public statement made by Colonel Roosevelt.

So great was the press of people who thronged the hotel anxious to see Colonel Roosevelt that it was decided at the last minute to hold a public reception in the red room at the Washington hotel. Colonel Roosevelt was in the red room for half an hour, during which time 200 people filed past.

At the conclusion of the reception Colonel Roosevelt, accompanied by five local progressives, went into conference in the colonel's room, where they remained for over an hour. The result of the talk was not given out. A conference between Colonel Roosevelt and Senator Miles C. Poindexter, late progressive leader, aroused even more discussion than the meeting of the local committee of five.

WILSON LIKELY TO BE FIRM WITH GERMANY

Washington.—With the return here Monday of President Wilson, the formulation of the policy to be pursued by the United States as a consequence of Germany's last note on submarine warfare was begun.

While details as to the course which is to be followed are withheld, it is known that both the president and Mr. Lansing have practically made up their minds that a definite statement of what the consequences of further violation of American rights would be should be given to the German government in the next communication. There is little likelihood that there will be any further discussion of the principles involved.

By the recent attempt to destroy the British liner Orduna, carrying a score of Americans on her voyage to the United States with no munitions or contraband, officials here feel that the position of the United States, as given in its previous notes, has been materially strengthened. They declare it bears out the American contention that the character of a vessel, her destination and cargo can be safely determined only by visit and search.

THE LINEK ORDUNA HAS NARROW ESCAPE

Steamer With 227 Passengers Including 21 Americans Attacked by Submarine

New York.—The Cunard liner Orduna bound from Liverpool to New York with 227 passengers, including 22 Americans, was attacked without warning, it was learned on her arrival here, by a German submarine on the morning of July 9.

Twenty miles from the graveyard of the Lusitania, off Oldhead of Kinsale, the Orduna escaped the Lusitania's fate by half a second of time or 10 yards of space, the German torpedo churning the water that distance behind the liner's rudder. Then the Orduna sped away. She was followed by the submarine, which rose to the surface, manned a gun on her deck and shelled the fleeing steamer.

The attack was at 10 minutes to 6 o'clock in the morning, when all but a few of her passengers lay sleeping in their berths. Aroused by stewards, the passengers dressed hurriedly and went to the upper deck, where they put on life belts and took their places at the lifeboats. They heard the scream of the shells and saw the ocean spit up columns of water where the shells struck.

Ten minutes before the attack a sailing ship, with two American flags painted on her side, was seen ahead. Captain Taylor became suspicious of this craft and began maneuvering his ship. Then came the attack, the first warning of which was the streak of a torpedo which whirled through the water and missed the Orduna's stern by ten yards or thereabouts.

The Cunard line made public Captain Taylor's official report, in which he said that he received not the least warning of the attack.
